Guests can explore remote parts of the 'Last Frontier' starting May 27, 2018

San Diego, CA – February 1, 2018 – Offshore Outpost Expeditions (OOE) announces the company has expanded its adventure yachting offerings with a new week-long Alaska itinerary on OOE's 160-foot Pacific Provider.

Starting May 27, 2018, the ship departs alternating weeks from Whittier or Cordova every Sunday through mid-September and offers guests unprecedented access to remote areas of Prince William Sound and its unmatched wildlife, disembarking the following Saturday. Weekly itineraries include kayaking to remote coves and unspoiled shorelines alongside rafts of otters, watching humpback whales and orcas, and seeing glaciers from a tender or hiking up to them onshore.

Throughout the week, guests enjoy an exceptional dining experience. There are opportunities to fish for salmon, rockfish, and lingcod, as well as gathering fresh prawns to be prepared nightly onboard by Chef Dave Long, who specializes in incorporating local ingredients into each of his dishes. During their stay, guests also enjoy a nightcap served over glacial ice hauled from the water and pulled onboard.

"Alaska is simply an incredible destination that always delivers on expectations. It's a place that can really connect you with nature and make you realize how grand the world is. Sharing the Last Frontier with only eleven other travelers...that's an experience of a lifetime," said Chief Expedition Officer Dave Mullen.

Prices for the inaugural season start at $7,500 per person, exclusive of airfare and gratuity. Bookings include accommodation in a spacious private stateroom, three fresh chef-prepared meals daily, all snacks and beverages including open bar, guided activities, high-end adventure gear for fishing and kayaking, a Saturday night hotel room in Anchorage (with complimentary airport shuttle) and transportation to and from the vessel.
